The wagons are authentic, made of wooden benches. Passing through the tunnels, in complete darkness, is a real adventure that remains in the memory forever. The train makes frequent breaks at the most beautiful viewpoints with an interesting story from the guide.

Featuring a very favorable geographical position, Kruševac area inhabited the population even in prehistoric times. Archaeological findings speak of life in this area since the Neolithic. Transport to Topola. A half-hour walk to the top of Oplenac, at an altitude of 347 meters, rises the Temple of St. George and the Mausoleum of the Serbian Royal Family Karadjordjevic. One of the strongest characteristics of the temple as a building is its interior decoration, made of a mosaic that covers an area of 3,570 m².

Five rulers of the Karadjordjevic dynasty and 24 members of the closest family found their eternal peace in the silence of the Oplenac temple. We will also visit Karadjordje Town, and the winegrower's house – the royal winery.

The King's diary notes are a very important and valuable document in which you can find out about everyday life in Topola. The king lived in the house, with short interruptions, until the fall of 1915, when he and his army began to withdraw from their homeland via Albania to Thessaloniki. In this house, Regent Aleksandar, between 1914 and 1915, coming from the main headquarters located in Kragujevac, submitted reports and plans for military operations. King Peter himself said that he loved to stay in this house and that in front of it, there is a wonderful view of his homeland and his endowment. Today, Peter's House is a museum gallery with thematic exhibits related to the Karadjordjevic dynasty.

As the Topola region has always been known for its vineyards, a house for winegrowers was built in Oplenac near the endowment complex. It is built in the traditional Šumadija style and is located on the northern slope of Oplenac. Its basements are buried in a slight slope of the land, and it has a spacious porch. It was built in 1911 and the manager of the royal vineyards lived in it for some time. Today, its premises serve as a gallery space, among the exhibits of which is the legacy of the famous Serbian painter Nikola Graovac.
